PROGRAM ON INDEPENDENT JOURNALISM

WHAT WE DO

The Open Society Foundations' Program on Independent Journalism supports creative, open-minded groups, investigative journalism networks and media organizations producing verifiable, trustworthy information on any platform, especially in places where such content is not only scarce but difficult to produce.

We are interested in the development of ideas, breaking new ground and taking advantage of the digital revolution in the production of news. We wish to secure a free and safe environment, focusing on activities that protect journalists, citizens practising journalism and sources of information from physical and legal harassment. We aim to improve global and regional connections, facilitate knowledge circulation, exchange ideas and learn from various contexts.
